Abbott & Costello, 71–72, 75, 89–90
Action approach. See Language-as-action approach Adjacency pairs, 77–78
Agents, xvi. See also Interlocutors; Speakers anticipatory eye movement and, 229–241
belief and, 71–91
conventions and, 331–343
deliberation and, 47–52
games and, 75–77, 336–338
intention and, 47–63
Japanese and, 231–232, 237–241
meaning coordination and, 75–91
pragmatic interpretation and, 39–63
qualification problem and, 51
self-organization and, 334–336 signaling and, 336–338
thematic associations and, 234
Allen, J. F., xvi, 41
Alloppena, P. D., 12–15, 20, 23, 25, 29
Almor, Amit, xix, 285–301, 365
Altmann, Gerry T. M., xix, 26, 61, 229–243, 347, 365
Alzheimer's disease, 294, 297 Ambiguity, 95–96.
authorship and, 318
belief and, 71–91
closed-set issues and, 22–28
lexical, 12–15
parsing and, 153–154, 303–315, 347
pragmatic interpretation and, 39–63
pronoun, 261–278
prosodic influences and, 209–223
qualification problem and, 51
rapid stress relief and, 245–258
reference and, 133–134, 154
syntactic, 16–19, 209–223
“Who's On First?” and, 71–72, 75, 89–90 working memory and, 6–7
Anaphors, 173
Anderson, A., 194–195
Arnold, Jennifer E., xix, 29, 149, 261–281, 365
Artificial Intelligence (AI), 41, 48, 59
Asch, Solomon, 320–321
Aslin, R. N., 20, 25
Attention
eye movement and, 9–11 (see also Eye movement)
intention and, 47–63
pragmatic interpretation and, 39–63
Authorship, 318–326
Aylett, Matthew P., xviii, 173–191, 365
Bailey, Karl G. D., xix, 303–316, 365
Ballard, D. H.
Bard, Ellen Gurman, xviii, 173–191, 365
Beckman, M. E., 211, 214 Belief, 71–72
adjacency pairs and, 77–78
conceptual pacts and, 73, 78–80
convention evolution and, 74–75 Belief (cont.)
dyads and, 75–89
games and, 75–77
grounding and, 78–85
meaning coordination and, 74–91
mutuality assumption and, 73–91
shared, 73
Beun, R-J., 163, 168
Bever, T. G., 347
Bock, J. K., 196, 202
Boundary tones, 214
Branigan, Holly P., xviii, 193–208, 365
Bratman, M. E., 48
Brennan, Susan E., xvi, 155, 365
belief and, 78–80, 85
dialogue and, 195
visual evidence and, 95–129
Britt, M. A., 26, 28
Brown, P., 155, 177
Brown-Schmidt, Sarah, xviii–xix, 4, 6, 30, 365
pronoun comprehension and, 261–281
real-time reference and, 153–171
Campana, Ellen, xviii, 4, 153–171, 365
Carlson, K., 215, 222n2
Carpenter, P. A., 288
Cassell, J., xvi
Chambers, Craig, 24, 28–29, 156
Chierchia, G., 346
Children, 30
adjective comparison and, 362
first-mention advantage and, 274 language development and, 19–22
phonology and, 249
pronoun comprehension and, 261–278
sensitivity and, 25
Chomsky, Noam, xi
Clark, H. H., xviii, 173
belief and, 78–80, 85
contribution model and, 97–98
copresence and, 177
dialogue and, 195
eye movement and, 4, 10, 15, 30
monologue and, 193
perspective and, 134
pronoun comprehension and, 262
reference and, 134, 155, 167
visual evidence and, 101–102, 107, 119
Cleland, A. A., 196–198, 201
Clifton, C., 61, 215, 222n2, 348, 350
Closed-set problem, 22–28
Cohen, P. R., 41
Collaboration, 40–41
cooporative conversation and, 55–59
Grice model and, 46–47
intention and, 47–63
planning inference and, 47–48
pragmatic interpretation and, 39–63 problem-solving and, 42–47
reference and, 133–150, 262
Common ground, 134–136, 149, 174, 331 Communication
belief and, 71–91
contribution model and, 97–98
convention emergence and, 331–343
cooporative conversation and, 55–59
dialogue and, 4–5, 193–206
dyads and, 75–89
eye movement and, 10–11 (see also Eye movement)
familiar/unfamiliar maps and, 104–119 Grice model and, 345–362 (see also Grice model)
grounding and, 78–85, 96–99, 104, 109–117, 120
informational-load hypothesis and, 286–299
intention and, 47–63
mediated, 123–124
mutuality assumption and, 73–91
 parsing and, 303–315
perspective and, 133–150
pragmatic interpretation and, 39–63
rapid stress relief and, 245–258
reference and, 133–171 (see also Reference) Comprehension
authorship and, 317–326
children and, 19–22, 261–278
conceptual pacts and, 73, 78–80
continuous, 6–7
contribution model and, 97–98
deliberation and, 47–52
dyads and, 75–89
first-mention advantage and, 274
grounding and, 78–85, 96–104, 109–117
head-position effect and, 304–312
informational-load hypothesis and, 287–299
intention and, 47–63
meaning and, 74–91, 100–119
methodology and, 7–9
mutuality assumption and, 73–91
partner specificity and, 78–85
pragmatic interpretation and, 39–63
pronouns and, 261–281
prosody and, 209–223
reference and, 133–171 (see also Reference)
sequential input and, 3–4 Computational theory, 39–40 best-guess approach and, 50 collaboration and, 53–59
deliberation and, 47–52
H-and-H hypothesis and, 176
intention and, 47–55, 59–63
level of, 60–61
listener model and, 175–189
logical omniscience and, 51–52
LTAG and, 61–62
pragmatic interpretation and, 39–63
qualification problem and, 51
representation of, 45
SPUD and, 61–62
symbolisms for, 48–53, 56
Conceptual pacts, 73, 78–80, 155
Confederate scripting, 193, 198–206
Constructivism, 319
Context, xii, 7, 149
adjective comparison and, 347–348, 351–362
ambiguity and, 16–19
anticipatory eye movement and, 229–241
authorship and, 317–326
dialogue and, 193
Grice model and, 345–362
Japanese and, 231–232, 237–241
modularity and, 345–347
mutual knowledge and, 134 (see also Knowledge)
partner specificity and, 78–80
pronoun comprehension and, 261–278
pronunciation clarity and, 173
rapid stress relief and, 245–258
reference and, 133–134, 153
visual-world paradigm and, 229–230 Conventions, 74–75, 342–343 common knowledge and, 332–334 convergence efficiency and, 338–339
dyads and, 331–332
generalizations and, 333
high-level strategic reasoning and, 341 iterated learning and, 335 membership categorization and, 341 metarepresentation and, 341 mutual expectations and, 332–333 self-organization of, 334–336
signaling and, 336–338
Conversation, xii–xiii
adjacency pairs and, 77–78
belief and, 71–91
common ground and, 174
conceptual pacts and, 73, 78–80, 155
correction model and, 97–98, 100–119
dialogue and, 193–206
dyads and, 75–89
efficiency of, 155
grounding and, 78–85, 96–99, 104, 109–117, 120
meaning coordination and, 74–91
mutual knowledge and, 75–91
online, 98–99, 174, 345–362 overhears and, 98, 210
parsing and, 153–154, 303–315
pronoun comprehension and, 261–278
prosodic influences and, 209–223
rapid stress relief and, 245–258 Conversation (cont.)
  reference and, 133–171 (see also Reference) spontaneous, 154
  visual evidence and, 99, 109–114
Cooper, R. M., 11, 229
Copresence default hypothesis, 177, 180–181 Crain, Stephen, xix, 365 context effects and, 347–348 eye movements and, 16, 18
  rapid stress relief and, 245–259
Cremers, A. H. M., 163, 168
Cutler, A., 249
Dale, R., 163
Decay, 293–297
Deliberation, 47–52, 58–59
Dell, G., 155, 177
Dialects, 75, 339
Dialogue. See also Conversation confederate scripting and, 193, 198–206
  context and, 193
  convention emergence and, 331–343 convergence effects and, 195
  double-object form and, 195–206 input-output coordination and, 195 interactive process and, 194 lexical repetition and, 193–206
  monologue and, 193–195, 197
  prepositional-object form and, 195–206 repetitiveness and, 194–198
Disfluency. See Parsing
Doherty, G., 342
Double-object construction
  dialogue and, 195–206
  rapid stress relief and, 252–257
Dual-process hypothesis, 177–178
Dunbar, R., 320
Dyads
  conceptual pacts and, 73, 78–80
  conventions and, 331–332
  grounding and, 80–85
  joint action and, 75–77
  linguistic precedents and, 78
  meaning coordination and, 75–89
  mutual knowledge and, 75–89
  partner specificity and, 78–80

Eberhard, K. M., 157, 248, 251
Ecological psychology, 319
Embodiment theory, 319
English, 98
  anticipatory eye movement and, 229–236, 239–241
  boundary tones and, 214
  final lengthening and, 212
  phonology and, 245–258
  pitch accents and, 214
  prosody and, 211–212
  Tones and Break Indices for, 214
  visual-world paradigm and, 229–230
Evolution, 320, 335
Eye movement, xv–xvi, 99, 119
  action approach and, 3–9
  adjective comparison and, 347–348, 351–362
  anticipatory, 229–241
  Applied Sciences Laboratories E5000 and, 139, 145
  children and, 19–22, 268, 273–275
  closed-set issues and, 22–28
  cohorts and, 157, 159–160
  continuous speech and, 12–16
  first-mention advantage and, 274
  grounding and, 80–85
  hidden objects and, 85–89
  interactive conversation and, 10–11
  ISCAN system and, 159, 254
  Japanese and, 231–232, 237–241
  lexical access and, 12–15
  mouse tracking and, 122–123
  mutual knowledge and, 80–89
  phonology and, 251–258
  pragmatic interpretation and, 46
  product approach and, 3–9
  rapid stress relief and, 251–258
reference and, 133–169 (see also Reference) saccades and, 9–11
sensitivity and, 25–28
SMI EyeLink tracker and, 234 syntactic-ambiguity resolution and, 16–19 task strategies and, 22–25 (see also Tasks) true/false determination and, 252–253
visual-world paradigm and, 12–28, 229–230
window of interest and, 13

Fagnano, Maria, xix, 261–281, 365
Fernald, A., 19–20, 22
Ferreira, Fernanda, xix, 303–316, 348, 350, 365
First-mention advantage, 274
Fisher, C., 265
Fitneva, Stanka A., xix, 317–327, 365 Fixation, 3, 9–11. See also Eye movement
adjective comparison and, 347–348, 351–360
perspective and, 136–150
target measurement and, 12–15 ttrue/false determination and, 252–253
Fluency. See Parsing
Foss, D., 249
Fox, B., 348
Frazier, L., 61, 215, 222n2

Games, 75–77
signaling, 336–338
syntactic ambiguity and, 209–223
Garrod, S. C., 167, 194–195, 342
Gender. See Pronouns
Gennari, Silvia, xix, 245–259, 366
Goals. See Tasks
Grammar
intention and, 40–41, 59–62
LTAG, 61–62
SPUD system and, 61–62
Grice model, xvii, xix, 79, 363
adjective comparison and, 347–348, 351–362
contribution model and, 97
conventions and, 331–343
form-context hypotheses and, 347–351
grounding and, 80, 83
informational-load hypothesis and, 287 intentions and, 46–47, 55, 58–59, 62–63 modularity issues and, 345–347 online processing and, 345–362
parsing and, 347
prosody and, 353–354
redundancy and, 349–350
syntax and, 347
Grounding, 78–79, 96
contribution model and, 97–98
corvergence and, 104
criteria for, 98
familiar/unfamiliar maps and, 104–120
online, 98–99
partner specificity and, 80–85
precision and, 104
visual/verbal evidence and, 109–114
Hanna, Joy E., xviii, 45, 57, 133–152, 366
Haywood, Sarah L., xix, 229–243, 366
Hazelhurst, B., 335
Head-position effect, 304–312
Henly, A. S., 90
Hirschberg, J., 214
Horn, L., 362
Hutchins, E., 335
Inference, 47–48, 173, 179–182
Intention, 63
deliberation and, 47–52
generation of, 61–62
individual, 47–52
joint, 53–55
planning inference and, 47–48
product approach and, 61–62
qualification problem and, 51
understanding as, 59–61
Interface model, 249–253
Interlocutors, xii–xiii
common ground and, 134–136, 174
convention emergence and, 331–343
copresence and, 177
Interlocutors (cont.)
dialogue and, 193–206
grounding and, 78–85
H-and-H hypothesis and, 176
hidden objects and, 85–89
listener model and, 173–189
mutual knowledge and, 73–91
parsing and, 303–315
partner specificity and, 78–85
pragmatic interpretation and, 39–63
prosodic influences and, 209–223
signaling and, 336–338
Interpretation. See also Reference
ambiguity and, 133–134
common ground and, 134–136, 149
context and, 149
experiments in, 136–150
matching tasks and, 136–150
mutual knowledge and, 134 (see also Knowledge)
perspective and, 133–150
rapid stress relief and, 245–258
Joint intentions, 53–55
Just, M. A., 288
Kamide, Yuki, xix, 26, 229–243, 366
Keysar, Boaz, xvii–xviii, 362, 366
belief and, 71–94
eye movement and, 30
perspective and, 134–135, 149
Knowledge, xvi
adjacency pairs and, 77–78
children and, 19–22
common ground and, 134–136, 149 computational theory and, 39–62
conventions and, 74–75, 331–343
deliberation and, 47–52
dyads and, 75–89
grounding and, 78–85, 96–99, 104–120
H-and-H hypothesis and, 176
hidden objects and, 85–89
inference number and, 52
intention and, 47–63
listener model and, 173–189
logical omniscience and, 51–52
meaning coordination and, 74–91
mutual, 73–91, 100–119
parsing and, 303–315
perspective and, 133–150
pragmatic interpretation and, 39–63
prosodic influences and, 209–223
referential interpretation and, 133–150
Krahmer, E., 163, 168
Krauss, R. M., 4

Language, 3
adjective comparison and, 347–348, 351–362
authorship and, 317–326
boundary tones and, 214
children and, 19–22
closed-set issues and, 22–28
continuous, 6–7, 12–16
convention emergence and, 331–343
development of, 19–22
English and, 98 (see also English)
eye movement and, 10–11 (see also Eye movement) formalization of, xvii–xix grammar and, 40–41, 59–62
Grice model and, 345–362 (see also Grice model)
grounding and, 78–85, 96–99, 104–120
meaning coordination and, 74–91
modifiers and, 21, 27
perspective and, 133–150
phonology and, 245–258
pitch accents and, 214
pragmatic interpretation and, 39–63 product/action approaches and, xi–xv
pronouns and, 261–278
pronunciation clarity and, 173, 176, 180
prosody and, 209–223
rapid stress relief and, 245–258
Marslen-Wilson, W. D., 318
Mathematics, 51, 289, 294
Meaning
belief and, 71–91
canceptual pacts and, 73, 78–80 coordination of, 74–91
dyads and, 75–89
familiar/unfamiliar maps and, 104–120
grounding and, 78–85
hidden objects and, 85–89
hypotheses for, 100–124
joint action and, 75–77
partner specificity and, 78–80 perceived success and, 89–91
syntax and, 77
visual evidence and, 99, 109–114
Memory, 6–7, 10, 266, 341–342
Alzheimer's disease and, 294, 297
conventions and, 338
decay and, 293–297
informational-load hypothesis and, 286–299 processing cost and, 287–288
reference and, 286
semantic overlap and, 287–288
specificity and, 288–289
Meroni, Luisa, xix, 245–259, 366
Metarepresentation, 341
Methodology, xv–xvi, 7–9
action approach and, 28–31
closed-set issues and, 22–28
conventional scripting and, 193, 198–206
conventions and, 336–343
disfluency experiments and, 306–313
eye movement and, 10–11 (see also Eye movement)
familiar/unfamiliar maps and, 104–119
informational-load hypothesis and, 286–299
lexical access and, 12–15
listener model and, 175–189
meaning hypotheses and, 100–119
pragmatic interpretation and, 39–63
product approach and, 28–31
pronoun comprehension and, 265–278
prosodic influences and, 213–223
reference and, 133–150, 156–169, 178–189
specificity factors and, 162–166 task compatibility and, 165–166
Miller, George, xi
Modality, xiii–xiv, 51, 101–103, 321
Models
computational theory, 39–62
confederate scripting, 193, 198–206 contribution, 97–98, 100–119 Grice, 46–47, 55, 58–59, 287 (see also Grice model)
informational-load hypothesis and, 286–299
interface, 249–253
listener, 174–189
Reinhart, 249–250
TRACE, 15
working memory, 6–7
Modifiers, 21, 27
Modularity hypotheses, 345–347
Monitor-and-adjust hypothesis, 177
Monologue, 193–195, 197
Nadig, A., 88, 149
National Science Foundation, xvii Neighborhood density, 25
Newell, A., 60
Ni, W., 248
Overhearers, 98, 210
Parsing, 153–154
basic principles of, 304–306 commonality of, 303–304
disfluency experiments and, 306–313
Grice model and, 347
head-position effect and, 304–312
pausing cues and, 304
product approach and, 303, 313–315
Partner specificity, 78–80
cohorts and, 157, 159–160
conventional scripting and, 193, 198–206
familiar/unfamiliar maps and, 104–119
grounding and, 78–85, 96–99, 104, 109–117, 120
meaning hypotheses and, 100–119
perspective and, 133–150
referential interpretation and, 133–150
Perrault, C. R., 41
Perspective. See also Reference
ambiguity and, 133–134
common ground and, 134–136, 149
cost and, 149
matching tasks and, 136–150
referential interpretation and, 133–150 Phonology
acoustic analysis and, 212–217 adults and, 249
ambiguity and, 245–258
children and, 249
convention emergence and, 331–343 double-object construction and, 252 interface model and, 249–253 marked-stress construction and, 251–252 prepositional-object construction and, 251–252
rapid stress relief and, 251–258
shift rule and, 250
task study of, 251–258
Pickering, Martin J., xviii, 167, 193–208, 366
Pierrehumbert, J. B., 211
Pinto, J. P., 20, 22
Pitch accents, 214
Pitrelli, J., 214
Planning inference, 47–48
Point of disambiguation. See also Ambiguity
perspective and, 137–142
prosodic influences and, 209–223
reference and, 157, 160–162, 168–169
PP-attachment studies, 26
Pragmatics, 39–41
cooperative conversation and, 55–59
deliberation and, 47–52
eye movement and, 46
Grice model and, 46–47
intention and, 47–63
LTAG and, 61–62
mutual expectations and, 332–333 representation motivation and, 42–47
SPUD system and, 61–62
Prepositional-object construction
rapid stress relief and, 251–257
syntactic priming and, 195–206 Priming, 6
confederate scripting and, 193, 198–206
cross-modal, xiii–xiv, 321
dialogue and, 193–206
double-object form and, 195–206
lexical repetition and, 193–206
syntactic, 195–206
Prince, E., 178
Principle of mutual responsibility, 97–98, 120 Processing. See also Comprehension
adjective comparison and, 351–362
anticipatory, 229–241
authorship and, 317–326
children and, 19–22, 25, 30, 249, 261–278, 362
confederate scripting, 193, 198–206
cost and, 7
continuous, 6–7
cost of, 287–288, 298, 300n1
decay and, 293–297
deliberation and, 47–52
dialogue and, 193–206
familiar/unfamiliar maps, 104–119
Grice model and, 345–362 (see also Grice model)
grounding and, 78–85, 96–99, 109–117, 120
head-position effect and, 304–312
informational-load hypothesis and, 286–299
intention and, 47–63
inverse typicality effect and, 292
Japanese and, 231–232, 237–241
listener model and, 173–189
low-codability shapes and, 155
modularity and, 345–347
online, 174, 345–362
parahand and, 153–154, 303–315 Processing (cont.)
perspective and, 133–150
point of disambiguation and, 137–142 (see also Ambiguity)
pragmatic interpretation and, 39–63
prosodic influences and, 209–223
reaction times and, 110–116, 118, 121 (see also Reaction times) real-time, 6, 29–30
reference and, 133–150, 153–171
semantic overlap and, 287–288
specificity and, 286, 288–289
syntax and, 16–19 (see also Syntax) time-locked, 3–4
verb-based frequencies and, 25–28
visual-world paradigm and, 229–230
working memory and, 6–7
Product approach. See Language-as-product approach Pronouns
children’s study on, 265–278 learning challenges and, 261–265
Pronunciation, 173, 176
Prosody
acoustic phonetic analyses of, 212–217
adjective comparison and, 353–354 ambiguity level and, 212–213 American English and, 211–212
boundary tones and, 214
categorization study and, 217–220
final lengthening and, 212
game tasks for, 209–223 Illocutionary force and, 212 intonation and, 211–212
overhearers and, 210
pausing and, 210
pitch accent and, 214
production sequence analysis and, 218–220 reading tasks and, 209–210
syntactic ambiguity and, 209–223
Proximity, 164–166
Psycholinguists, xi. See also Linguistics action approach and, 3–9, 28–31 dialogue and, 193–206 (see also Conversation)
grounding and, 78–85, 96–99, 109–117, 120
parsing and, 303–315
pragmatic interpretation and, 39–63
product approach and, 3–9, 28–31
pronoun comprehension and, 261–278
rapid stress relief and, 245–258
reference and, 153–171 (see also Reference)
PsyScope, 254, 267
Qualification problem, 51 Reaction times, 3
anticipatory eye movement and, 229–241
authorship and, 319, 321–325
familiar/unfamiliar maps and, 110–111, 113, 115–116, 118, 121
grounding and, 80–85
head-position effect and, 304–312
informational-load hypothesis and, 286–299
lexical access and, 12–15
Luce choice rule and, 15
PsyScope and, 254, 267
rapid stress relief and, 254–257
real-time measurement of, 156–169
Reading, 10
Recency, 163–167
Redundancy, 349–350
Reference
ambiguity and, 133–134
anaphors and, 173
cohorts and, 157, 159–160
collaborative nature of, 262
common ground and, 134–136, 149, 174
computational investigation of, 285–299
conceptual pacts and, 155
context and, 133–134, 149, 153
copresence default hypothesis and, 177, 180–181
decay and, 293–297
definite, 133–134, 156–157 distributed representations and, 288–293
Index

Referential context effects and, 345–364
Segal, G., 56
Self-organization, 334–336
Semantic overlap, 287–288
Sensitivity, 25–28
Sentence planning using description (SPUD), 61–62
Sentence processing, xii. See also Processing
Adjective comparison and, 347–348, 351–362
Ambiguity and, 16–19 (see also Ambiguity)
authorship and, 317–326
Children and, 19–22
dialogue and, 193–206
end-of-sentence word recognition and, 318
Japanese and, 231–232, 237–241
Parsing and, 303–315
Pragmatic interpretation and, 39–63
pronoun comprehension and, 261–278
Prosodic influences and, 209–223
rapid stress relief and, 245–258 reaction times and, 3
Referential interpretation and, 133–150
Syntax and, 16–19 (see also Syntax)
verb-based frequencies and, 25–28
visual-world paradigm and, 229–230
Sequential input, 3–4
Shankweiler, D., 248
Signaling, 336–338
Simon, H., 104
Situated cognition theory, 319
Sloman, S. A., 84–85
Snedeker, J., 26–27, 222n1
Song, H., 265
Speakers, 6, 8. See also Conversation
authorship and, 317–326
belief and, 71–91
common ground and, 134–136, 174
Convention emergence and, 331–343
copresence and, 177
dialogue and, 193–206
Grice model and, 345–362 (see also Grice model)
grounding and, 78–85, 96–99, 109–117, 120

Saccades. See Eye movement
Scalar quantities, 289, 294
Adjective comparisons and, 347–348, 351–362
Schaefer, E. F., 97–98, 102
Schafer, Amy J., xviii, 209–225, 366
Schober, M. F., 107, 119, 155
Sedivy, Julie C., xix, 366
Belief and, 88
Perspective and, 149
Rapid stress relief and, 248–249

Dual-process hypothesis and, 177–178
Expression form and, 179
Feedback and, 182–183
giveness and, 178–179
Grice model and, 345–362
H-and-H hypothesis and, 176, 180–181, 184–185
Inference and, 173, 179–182
Informational-load hypothesis and, 286–299
Inverse typicality effect and, 292
 Listener model and, 173–189
Matching tasks and, 136–150
Memory and, 286
Monitor-and-adjust hypothesis and, 177
Online techniques and, 174, 345–362
Point of disambiguation and, 137–142, 157, 160–162, 168–169
Pronoun comprehension and, 261–278
Pronunciation clarity and, 173, 176, 180
Proximity and, 164–166
Recency and, 163–167
Scripting and, 154–156
Speaker knowledge and, 185–189
Specificity and, 162–166, 286, 288–289
Stimuli type and, 153–154
Syntax and, 154, 173–174, 176, 179 tailoring and, 174–189
task compatibility and, 165–166
Reinhart, T., 249–250
Reiter, E., 163
Reynolds, C. W., 334

Saccades. See Eye movement
Scalar quantities, 289, 294
Adjective comparisons and, 347–348, 351–362
Schaefer, E. F., 97–98, 102
Schafer, Amy J., xviii, 209–225, 366
Schober, M. F., 107, 119, 155
Sedivy, Julie C., xix, 366
Belief and, 88
Perspective and, 149
Rapid stress relief and, 248–249
Speakers (cont.)
H-and-H hypothesis and, 176
listener model and, 173–189
parsing and, 303–315
partner specificity and, 78–85
pragmatic interpretation and, 39–63
pronoun comprehension and, 261–278
prosodic influences and, 209–223
rapid stress relief and, 245–258
reference and, 133–150, 153–171 (see also Reference)
signaling and, 336–338
Spectrograms, 214
Speech act theory, 41
Speer, Shari R., xviii, 209–225, 366
Spivey, Michael J., xix, 17, 28, 317–327, 366
SPUD, 61–62
Steedman, M., 16, 18, 347–348
Steels, L., 335, 341
Stimuli. See Input/output
Stone, Matthew, xvi–xvii, 39–69, 366
Strategies, 23–25
Straub, K. A., 210–211
Stress. See Phonology
Swingley, D., 19–20, 22
Syntax, xii
adjunctive comparison and, 347–348, 351–362
ambiguity and, 16–19, 209–223
anticipatory eye movement and, 229–241
confederate scripting and, 193, 198–206
context and, 7
convention emergence and, 331–343
Grice model and, 347
head-position effect and, 304–312
lexical repetition and, 193–206
meaning and, 77
parsing and, 303–315
phonology and, 245–258
priming and, 193–206
prosodic influences and, 209–223
reference and, 133–150, 153–171 (see also Reference)
sensitivity and, 25–28
sequential input and, 3–4
verb-based frequencies and, 25–28
Tanenhaus, Michael K., xvii–xviii, 57, 366
adjunctive comparison and, 347
eye movement and, 3–37
perspective and, 133–152
real-time reference and, 153–171
visual-world paradigm and, 229–230
Tasks, xvi
adjunctive comparison and, 351–362
ambiguity and, 16–19, 137–142
authorship and, 320–325
closed-set issues and, 22–28
compatibility and, 165–166
confederate scripting, 198–206
conventions and, 336–343
eye movement and, 10–11, 233–241
familiar/unfamiliar maps, 104–119
first-mention advantage and, 274 fixation measurement and, 9–11
games and, 75–77, 209–223, 336–338
grounding and, 80–85
hidden objects and, 85–89
informational-load hypothesis and, 286–299
intention and, 47–63
Japanese and, 231–232, 237–241
lexical access and, 12–15
listener model and, 179–189
meaning hypotheses and, 100–119
modality and, 101–103
mutual knowledge and, 80–89
pragmatic interpretation and, 39–63
pronoun comprehension and, 265–278
prosodic influences and, 212–223
rapid stress relief and, 251–258
reaction times and, 3 (see also Reaction times)
reference and, 133–150, 156–169, 175–189
sensitivity and, 25–28
strategy issues and, 23–25
visual evidence and, 99
Theune, E., 163, 168
Index

Thompson, S., 348
Thorpe, K., 26
Time-locked response, 3–4
TRACE model, 15
Trueswell, John C. xvii, xix, 222n1, 366
common ground and, 135–136, 149
eye movement and, 3–37
pronoun comprehension and, 261–281
Tyler, L. K., 318

Verb phrase. See Sentence processing

Visual evidence, xviii, 99
adjective comparison and, 347–348, 351–362
eye tracking and, xv–xvi familiar/unfamiliar maps, 104–120
gender use and, 266
grounding and, 104, 109–114
hidden objects and, 85–89
meaning hypotheses and, 100–119
modality and, 101–103
phonology study and, 251–258 Visual-world paradigm
closed-set issues and, 22–28
document and, 229–230
eye movement and, 12–28, 229–230
lexical access and, 12–16
syntactic-ambiguity and, 16–19

Warren, Paul, 209–225, 366
Weinheimer, S., 4
Wilkes-Gibbs, D., xviii, 97, 155
Window of interest, 13
Wizard-of-Oz approach, xvi
Working memory, 6–7
Wykes, T., 265

Young, H. P., 343